

PATCHWORK GARDEN NEWS

This year just gets more unbelievable every day! I send my prays and well wishes to everyone. To all the healthcare professionals that go into work everyday & can do nothing to save people. I applaud what they do. I could never do it. (Hence my accounting career)

In no way am I making light of the situation when I use humor. It is my way of dealing with stress and horror. Many of you who know me know this and I don't mean to offend or belittle anyone's pain by trying to lighten the situation.

To all our families and friends God Bless and stay safe & healthy!

Hello my Friends,

So what ya been doing? Masks? Hats? Eating? Watching too much TV? All of it? I know I have.

I feel like I pick up the phone to talk to people & the conversation goes the same everytime we talk.

Me: Hello, How are you?

My person: I'm good & you?

Me: I am good. What have you been doing?

My person: Making masks. You?

Me: Masks too. Ok I'll call tomorrow to see if anything happens then. OK?

My person: Sure OK.

How about you? I am posting silly stuff on Facebook. Mango's eating habits was a thrilling post! Boring!

BUT.....There was some excitement today! The other day a gecko got into the house. The cat, Smokey was all into it. But the darn thing went under the molding & Smokey could not get at it. But then today! I hear Smokey, the cat in my bedroom making a lot of noise. Mango was by the door keeping a look out. Then they both come running out & the cat has something in his mouth. Yes, the darn gecko! Well, the two of them were busy for an hour tormenting the thing. The cat was batting it, swung it over to Mango. Mango tried to do what the cat did by putting it in his mouth but being a dog he did not know how to do it so the gecko clung onto Mango's face fur. Mango started freaking out! It was so funny. Smokey came to the rescue got the gecko away. I found it dead a few hours later. I set it out outside the door as a warning to other geckos that this is the house of horrors if you are a gecko. Stay away!

-STAY HEALTHY MY FRIENDS, Bernadette
